Washington Juggling Act

went into the administration's revised tax package can't conceal one hard fact: The patchwork approach to the federal tax law is as inequitable as the law itself.

President Kennedy's retreat from tax reforms, which he once emphasized were inextricably tied to rate reduction, leaves loopholes and inequities intact. And they'll remain intact until the law is rewritten from scratch

There is room for plenty of debate over whether the revised proposal is an improvement over the original, but the disturbing aspect is the way the whole clumsy law is being juggled.

GOVERNMENTAL uncertainty does nothing to inspire taxpayer confidence, and the Washington juggling act reflects considerable uncertainty.

Early in the year, the administration represented the reduction-reform proposal as the best anyone could devise. But the signs of uncertainty were showing even then. The President, by suggesting reductions alone were needed to ward off a recession, indicated the reform idea might not be around

Then came the revamping. Sure enough, no reforms, but more juggling. And by tossing in a revised plan, the administration is in effect admitting that the original left something to be desired.

And what has all the juggling accomplished? It has not solved the basic problem of simplifying or clarifying the complex tax regulations which get a little more confusing

NOR HAS the juggling tackled the big economic question of whether substantial tax cuts are justified without corresponding reductions in federal spending.

What the juggling has done is to heap uncertainty on confusion. It has in effect sanctified the federal tax law inequities by ignoring the essential job of rebuilding an eroded tax base.

The only way to wipe out the inequities and uncertainty is to chuck the patchwork, break up the juggling act and rewrite the whole works with ground rules taxpayers can understand and obey.

The Cold Chicken War

The great debate - "Which came first, the chicken or the egg" - has paled to insignificance. The voices of free world trade advocates are "all choked up" on chicken.

Just 10 months after passage of the Trade Expansion Act that was supposed to make the American export business boom, U.S. negotiations with the European Common Market on tariff reductions are in a bad way.

By comparison with trying to get European common market countries to reduce their tariffs on frozen poultry imports from the United States, negotiations with Russia look DUBBED the "Cold Chicken War," the poultry tariff issue has created such a commotion on Capitol Hill that Richard Phalon has written, in a dispatch for the New York Herald Tribune News Service, that: "Not since 1935, when Brooklyn poultry dealer Joseph Schechter and his 'sick chicken' case gave the Supreme Court an excuse to invalidate the New Deal's National Industrial Recovery Act, has the lowly fowl kicked up such a fuss.

The commotion has reached such a point that sober statesmen on both sides of the Atlantic are beginning to talk gloomily of the old protectionism. Tempers are shortened. High hopes for a lowering of trade barriers are shaken.

By raising tariff on U.S. chickens from 4 cents a pound to more than 23 cents, the Common Market countries have taken a big step toward freezing U.S. poultrymen out of a rich market.

American ire is understandable.

As measured against the total volume of U.S-Common Market trade, the chicken war is mere "chicken feed" - less than 5 per cent of the $1.2 billion of U.S. agricultural exports and little more than 1 per cent of the total U.S. exports to the Common Market.

THE ADMINISTRATION in Washington has said it gladly will call off its plans for retaliatory tariff increases if the chicken tariffs are reduced but Common Market nations have indicated they have no such intention. Their immediate reaction was to call the U.S. retaliatory plans illegal.

Whether or not the chicken war is a passing incident, a trade battle will become more obvious next year when representatives of the United States and Common Market nations gather for scheduled negotiations on general tariff reductions.

But war or incident, the United States is alerted to never underestimate the power of a chicken-even the feathered kind

Keeping Them In The Air

Young women who use the aisle of an air- lines still want to impress their passengers plane as a walkway to the aisle of the church have been giving the U.S. airline industry its biggest employment headache.

Airlines are taking steps to cut the loss of stewardesses who turn in their uniforms to hit the silk and satin wedding gown set.

It's a costly turnover. The Wall Street Journal estimates that the nation's 53 scheduled airlines may spend $3.5 million this year to recruit and train 5,000 stewardesses they'll need to maintain a total force of 12.400

The marriage problem, of course, is tied to the airlines' hiring policy. Only young, pretty girls are considered for stewardess

The solution, according to the Journal, won't be found in hiring the homely. Air-

TV Boon To Nurses

The Japanese nurse lacks glamour.

In Japan, where there is no Florence Night-Ingale or Clara Barton tradition, the profession of nursing has rated close to zero in prestige with the public.

So called "high class" Japanese girls turn up their noses at the thought of becoming

And although attitudes are changing, even doctors are accused of treating Japan's "white-robed angels" as personal servants and patients order them to run errands and wash clothes.

In the last five years, applicants to all kinds of nursing schools have dropped by about 40 per cent.

At the moment, there are about 180,-000 registered or practical nurses working in hospitals or clinics throughout Japan -20,000 less than are needed. In addition, the yearly drop-out is about 10,000 while only 9,500 new nurses enter the profession.

THE MINISTRY of Health and Welfare has become alarmed by the shortage of nurses and the profession's lack of prestige within the Japanese community

Mrs. Sada Nagano, chief of Nursing Sectin, Medical Affairs Bureau of the ministry, admitted that young girls are still more attracted to other expanding job opportunities such as becoming office girls, airline stewardesses or assembling transistor radios.

She complained that the profession needs more girls from "upper class families" to raise the level of nursing in Japan.

However, she said more nursing training programs on a junior college or university level are necessary for recruitment from "better families" which believe education enhances a girl's chances on the marriage with pretty girls. What most major lines are doing is to put more emphasis on screening to weed out girls who think the job is engaging only because of the opportunities for engagement.

At present, there are five junior colleges and two universities with nurse training programs.

Some are finding that divorcees who couldn't get their feet on the ground in domestic life make good material for careers in the air.

It seems to us, however, that many airlines are creating their own employment problems by making marriage grounds for dismissal. At least one airline-TWA-has found room for about 200 wives in its corps of stewardesses

If their husbands don't object, why should the airline?

By Jack Russell

Mrs. Nagano said that Japanese nurses have become more respected since World War II, although the profession was not esteemed as it is in the United States or

However, she said that there was one bright spot. The government television network, NHK, is currently broadcasting the American TV program "The Nurses," with Japanese dubbed in.

"This program has helped us a lot in creating a more favorable opinion of nursing by the public," she said.

Although pay has increased recently, she said that it still should be better. The average monthly wage for nurses in government hospitals is about $58 and $50 for those in private hospitals.

Wages were boosted significantly in private hospitals after a strike by nurses in 1960 in which the white-uniformed girls chanted that they were "Nai-Chin girls" (no pay girls) and not "Nightingale girls."

The Ministry of Health and Welfare believes that it must have 250,000 nurses or 70,000 more than the present number by

In an effort to lure more girls into the profession, it is planning to raise the educational level in many of the nursing schools to the junior college level.

IT ALSO IS considering a boost in night differential pay by 25 per cent. The average Japanese nurse now works about 10 nights a

Mrs. Nagano protested also that 30 per cent of the Japanese nurse's work now could be handled by non-professionals. She mentioned such duties as "clerical work and being messengers."

But she said that nursing had only been on a sound footing since 1948 when new legislation was passed establishing professional and training standards for nursing.

The Senate's Role In Case Of Treaties

By DAVID LAWRENCE

It's been such a long time since a treaty of major importance was submitted to the Senate that many persons probably are unfamiliar with the fact that no treaty is really binding upon the Unitless "two thirds of the senators present concur" in its ratification. The signature David Lawrence of the secretary of state alone is not sufficient under the Constitution. "Executive agreements" do not require ratification by the Senate. These have been so numerous in recent years that the word "treaty" has fallen somewhat into disuse.

There is full understanding, however, under international law that "reservations" may be included in the resolution of ratification as a means of setting forth the understanding of one side or the other as to the meaning of cer-

His statement is an illuminat-

The Senate, on the other hand, can include any "interpretative reservations" that it pleases.

It would be a simple matter to pass a resolution ratifying the treaty and including as "interpretative reservations" the substance of certain extracts from the statement of Secretary Rusk.

SOME OF the pertinent extracts which could be put in the form of "reservations" are as will subscribe to the treaty in Moscow. The Soviet Union may notify us of that act. We are under no obligation to accept that notification, and we have no intention of doing so, but the East German regime would have committed itself to abide by the provisions of the treaty.

"By this arrangement, we not only assure that no implication of recognition may arise, but we reserve our right to object if later the East German regime should seek to assert privileges under the treaty, such as voting or participating in a conference called

under Article II.'

Actually, it wouldn't be necessary to mention the name of the East German regime, and the "reservation" could be in general language that would apply not only to East Germany but to Cuba and to other countries from which the United States has withdrawn recognition or to which it has not extended recognition.

ANOTHER SIGNIFICANT excerpt from the secretary's statement is the following:

President Wilson and the Democratic party in the Senate were opposed to the Lodge reservations, but they favored the Hitchcock reservations

Neither set of reservations obtained the necessary majority in the Senate and the treaty itself failed of adoption. It has long been established that

Top men in the administration. in testimony before Senate committees considering the limited nuclear test ban treaty, have proclaimed one after another American nuclear superiority.

And not a word from Premier Khrushchev.

From Geneva The Associated Press reported that diplomatic sources said Russia last week promised this country it would not try to exploit in any way Senate debate over approval of the treaty.

This kind of Russian cooperation, to get American approval of a treaty which Russia wants as much as the Kennedy administration, is probably unprecedented, at least in recent history. Russian agreement to the treaty is even more unusual-if it, too, thinks the United States has such superiority-since the treaty, by banning all tests except underground, makes Russian efforts to catch up more difficult. Together the Senate hearings and debate will take perhaps a month or more. That's a long time for Khrushchev to keep quiet while the United States goes unchallenged in telling the world Russia is second-best. This silence can hardly last forever and probably won't any longer than it takes the Senate to give its approval. Russia might make that approval much more doubtful if it began shouting counterclaims now

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, for instance, said this country has held communism in check 18 years by the "deterrent force of our massive military strength."

And he added: "We shall maintain that overwhelming strength until we are certain that freedom can be assured by other means.' And even though Rusk played badminton with Khrushchev last American superiority.

week, he didn't hesitate to express less than complete confidence Khrushchev wouldn't cheat on the treaty. He said he couldn't guarantee it wouldn't happen.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara was even more emphatic. He said flatly American nuclear forces "are manifestly superior." He assured his listeners this superiority would be prolonged rather than diminished by the treaty.

Even in testing underground. the only kind the treaty permits and the kind President Kennedy said this country will definitely continue, McNamara said this country "has had substantially more experience.

Therefore, he said, the agreement would "at least retard Soviet progress and prolong the duration of our technological superiority." He went even further. He expressed the opinion that the increase in American superiority over the last four years probably made the Soviet Union decide to agree to the test ban.

Next came Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to say these top military men consider the United States "clearly ahead" of the Soviets "in the ability to wage strategic war" and that it is probably ahead "in the ability to wage tac-

Under the combined testimony of these three men any opposition left in the Senate seemed badly melted.

The three didn't say they had compared notes before testifying. But Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., thought it odd that all three expressed fear that "euphoria" in the West over the treaty might reduce its vigilance.

The dictionary defines euphoria as a "feeling of well-being or elation, specially one that is groundless." Yet, nothing could do more to give the West a feeling of elation than the testimony of Rusk. McNamara and Taylor about

BALDNESS INCURABLE

About six months ago I started losing my hair. My doctor gave me thyroid but this didn't help. What can I do to prevent more hair loss?

A. No information is given by the reader re-garding age or sex so we must stick to a general statement. A few disease conditions can cause loss of scalp hair and some women experience temporary loss of hair following childbirth. Excluding these situations, there remains a vast number of men (and a few women) who experi-ence what may be termed "male-type baldness." Nothing has yet been developed which will pre-vent or "cure" baldness of this type.

LEG BLISTERS

Q. I have water blisters on my legs. The blisters, which until last year occurred only during summer months, burst and make sores. What causes this?

A. There could be many possible causes (including sensitivity to sunlight or ultraviolet light), but surely you have sought medical advice by now. If you haven't-do so.

Joint U.S.-Soviet Space Venture Slated

WASHINGTON (AP)-The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is reported ready to announce a joint U.S.-Soviet space venture-perhaps an Echo space balloon to bounce messages across the Iron Curtain.

The speculation stems partly from announcement Monday that NASA has let a contract for three more Echo space communications balloons, one of them to be launched from the Pacific missile range this winter.

The United States uses the Pacific range to launch satellites into polar orbit-a route which crosses the Soviet Union.

A space agency spokesman would say only that it will detail functions of an earlier agreement between Hugh Dryden, space agency deputy administrator, and A. L. Blagonarov, head of the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

INDIANS

-Junior Editors Quiz on-

QUESTION: From where did the American Indians come?

ANSWER: In 1926, a remarkably well made stone spearhead was found near Folsom, N. M., close to the bones of a kind of bison long extinct. Other similar spearheads have been found. Experts generally accept these as proof that early man was hunting animals in America as far back as the last ice age. More and more traces of ancient man are coming to light.

The story is not exactly known as yet, but a summary of the scientists' conclusions might go like this: the North and South American Indians came from common ancestors who originally lived in northern Asia. About 15,000 to 20,000 years ago, these ancestors entered America across the Bering Strait. Many believe that a land bridge then connected Asia and Alaska. It is thought that since these ancient people were hunters, they followed herds of large animals (such as the mammoth in our picture) across the land bridge into America. This probably happened slowly, group by group. The people gradually fanned out and became the American Indians, some continuing to hunt, others learning to grow corn and maize. Many continued down into South America. By 7,000 B. C. it is estimated they had reached the southernmost point.

FOR YOU TO DO: Look up "prehistoric animals" in an encyclopedia to find what other prey the American Indians' ancestors could have been after.

Helen Getty of Howard, Pa., wins today's grand prize of a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia for this question. Mail yours on a postcard to Junior Editors in care of The Review and you too may win a set.
